

Virtual Event

1.2 CRC CEUs

The film industry is taking off in Oklahoma due in large part to the driving vision of Prairie Surf Media. In this event, Matt Payne, the co-CEO of Prairie Surf Media, will educate attendees on the various operational aspects of film production with a focus on the economic impact on the State. Matt will also discuss the tax credits offered by the State which were approved to encourage expanding the film industry in Oklahoma. This event will provide attendees with the base knowledge of the film industry and how it affects Oklahoma businesses.

Oklahoma native Matt Payne, co-founder of Prairie Surf Media, a locally based production studio, is an Emmy Award winning filmmaker, travel photographer and writer. Matt is a graduate of the film school at the University of Oklahoma. He spent 15 years in Los Angeles working in both television and film racking up credits as a writer, documentary filmmaker and award-winning travel photographer. While at OU, Matt met his long-time friend and partner Rachel Cannon. After returning to Oklahoma, Matt and Rachel had a vision to bring filmmaking to the Sooner State. Their opportunity came in the midst of the pandemic with the formation of Prairie Surf Media in 2020. The production studio has spawned a growth in the industry and was the force behind legislative change. Additionally, Matt works with local colleges and universities to ensure Oklahoma talent has the educational resources to support the industry.
