Bank Regulatory Panel

The disruptive factors of 2022, such as high inflation, interest rate volatility, the Russia-Ukraine conflict, lingering effects of the pandemic, stock and bond market downturns, and events in the crypto asset markets, have influenced banking regulatory perspectives and will likely impact the direction banking regulations will take in 2023. What are the key regulatory challenges? What will banking regulations look like in 2024? Plan to attend the RMA Oklahoma Chapter upcoming Regulatory panel to find out answers to these questions and more.

Panel Members:

Brian Wall is the Assistant Deputy Comptroller for the Oklahoma City Field Office, which has 21 financial institutions in central and western Oklahoma and a staff of 14 examiners. Brian began his career with the OCC in 1998 in the Wichita, KS Office. After earning his commission, he transferred to the San Diego, CA Office, and later the Fort Worth, TX Office. Brian was the ADC Analyst in the Dallas, TX Office for 5 years before becoming a team leader where he was responsible for the training and development of the pre-commissioned examiner staff. Prior to joining the OCC, Brian worked for a small community bank in Southern Kansas.

Scott Williams is the Assistant Deputy Comptroller for Midsize and Community Bank Supervision in the Tulsa Office. Scott has been the Comptroller for the Tulsa Office since 2018 in the Southeast Region of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC). He supervises 18 community national banks and federal savings associations and the office examination team. He serves as a member of the regional Supervisory Review Committee. Mr. Williams joined the OCC in 1984 as an associate national bank examiner in Oklahoma City.

Doug Gray is an Assistant Vice President in the Examination and Inspections department at the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City. Doug joined the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City in 2000 and served as a field examiner for 6 years, specializing in Bank Secrecy Act, market and liquidity risk, and investment portfolio evaluations. He now oversees a staff of examiners and managers responsible for community bank safety and soundness examinations. Doug holds a B.A. degree in Economics and an M.B.A. with an emphasis in Finance and MIS from the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma. Doug also earned a Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) charter in 2005.
