The National Social Studies Supervisors Association (NSSSA) was founded in 1970 and is an affiliate of the National Council for the Social Studies. NSSSA has members in nearly every state and in several territories and other countries.

NSSSA promotes the common interests of social studies leaders in curriculum, instruction, research, teacher training, and social action. As stated in its constitution, the purposes and objectives of NSSSA shall be to:

- "Promote the common interests of social studies supervisors and leaders;
- Encourage and assist in the development of sound supervisory practices that will promote improvement of social studies instruction;
- Promote membership in NSSSA and NCSS; and,
- Assist in the formation of state and local affiliates of social studies supervisors and leaders."

MEMBERSHIP

Membership in NSSSA is open to supervisors, administrators, teachers, and others who are members of NCSS and have or aspire to have responsibilities for the development, implementation, and supervision of social studies curriculum and instructional programs."

NSSSA members include individuals with titles such as director, department chair, curriculum coordinator, supervisor, specialist, or assistant principal. NSSSA members also include colleagues in higher education responsible for teacher preparation.
