

Dwayne Purvis has been practicing reservoir engineering since 1995. He spent 18 years as a reservoir engineering consultant at Cawley, Gillespie and Associates and then as Executive Vice President at The Strickland Group. Most recently he served Jetta Operating in Fort Worth as Reservoir Engineering Manager and Reserves Manager before starting his own consulting practice.

Mr. Purvis began working modern shale reservoirs in 2003 when the Barnett Shale was still being drilled vertically. In 2005 his work was one of the first in the emerging Fayetteville Shale. Over the last 12 years he has worked a total of 11 shale plays, including one international play, and valued and advised on billions of dollars of proposed transactions of shale properties. He is a member of SPE, AAPG, SEG and (soon to be) SPEE.
