

LEADERS: Leveraging Employee Aptitudes to Deliver Excellence in Research Services

Tanta Myles | Associate Vice President for Research Integrity Assurance
| Georgia Institute of Technology

Susan Wyatt Sedwick | Sr. Consulting Specialist | Attain Partners

Learning Objectives

Identify effective and cost-efficient mechanisms to develop and retain remote, hybrid and onsite staff.

Convince skeptical senior leadership that remote and hybrid workforces are effective.

Identify motivating factors behind excellent research administration performance.

Polling Question

My organization:

- Is fully in person
- Is hybrid with staff required to work a portion of their time in the office and partially remote
- Is mostly remote with only leadership roles required to be in the office
- Is a fully remote

Best Practices in Remote Employee Integration

Onboarding

1. Think of onboarding as the first step to “employee integration.”
2. Start onboarding early by getting new employees online access as quickly as possible. This includes software tools such as Teams, Zoom, and Slack, as applicable.
3. Ensure their technology is up to date, functioning properly and internet service supports remote work.
4. Provide an orientation to the website and location of resources.

Building Community

1. Create a sense of belonging by being deliberate but not intrusive about building connections e.g. video introductions.
2. Provide an individualized remote employee integration plan with video check-ins and goals that are tracked.
3. Assign a mentor besides the manager and encourage virtual staff lunches, coffee or breaks. Provide training for mentors.
4. Provide introductions with key stakeholders and insights on their roles.

A person is seen from the side, sitting at a desk and working on a laptop. The laptop screen displays a website for an online class, featuring a woman and a child, and the text 'ONLINE CLASS'. The website has a navigation bar with 'Courses', 'Log in', and 'Sign Up' buttons. Below the main image, there are icons for 'Education', 'ABC', 'qualifications', and 'Contact Us'. The person's hands are on the laptop keyboard. The background shows a desk with a pen holder, a lamp, and some papers.

Professional Development/Training

1. Set clear expectations using an integration checklist.
2. Smile for the camera!
3. Have a training plan with plenty of active learning opportunities and consider all learning types.
4. Initiate professional development and personal growth from the start.
5. Encourage collaborative learning.

Most Important Drivers of Great Work

3.8x

Employees who strongly agree that recognition is an important part of their organization are 3.8 times as likely to strongly agree that they feel connected to their culture.

72%

Among employees who have great recognition experiences, 72% say that performance on "little things" is commonly recognized at their organization.

What Motivates People?

Daniel Pink says -

Money is a motivator, but:

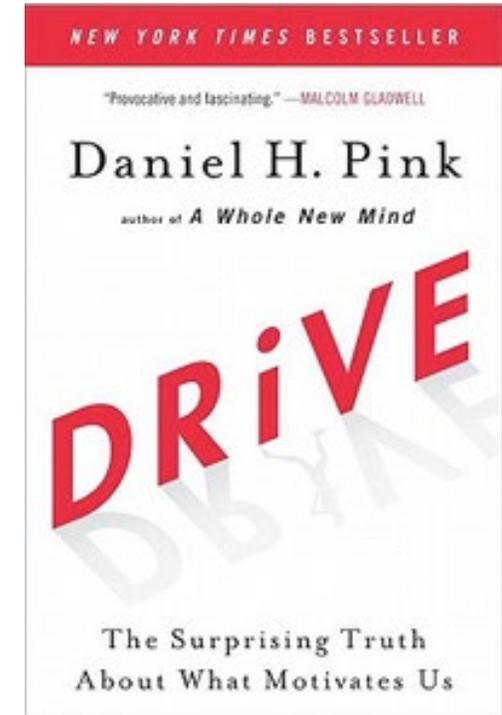

— Only to the extent you pay “enough”

Real motivators are:

— Autonomy

— Mastery

— Purpose

Culture of Recognition

Engaging Conversation Starters

- One of the best ways to start individualizing your approach to recognition is to ask your team members directly what is meaningful to them. Utilize this guide in your next one-on-one conversation.

Subject: Scheduling a Healthier New Year

For the next several weeks, at least until the days get a good bit longer and the temperature gets a bit warmer, generally I'll be taking my "lunch" break 4:00-5:00 each day. Most days I will check back in at 5:00 to see if there is anything that can't wait until the next day but getting things to me earlier in the day will increase the chances of them getting attention that day. (And, all Directors and Managers have my personal contact information so, it is always possible to find me if there is a real emergency.)

You may be wondering why I am telling ALLLLLLLLL of you this. Well, it is because my well-being has deteriorated over the past several years and I realized over the break that Georgia Tech allows me the ability to do something about it, and even encourages it. So, I am also encouraging all of you to think about your routines and whether you have room to take advantage of some of the benefits the Institute provides. And, I'm going to try to set a better example going forward!

Of course you should work with your supervisor to ensure each team has adequate coverage at all times but, I'm supportive of flexible schedules that allow people to take care of themselves and their families. Also, don't forget Georgia Tech offers many other benefits that I bet most of us rarely think about, <https://benefits.hr.gatech.edu/perks-and-programs/>.

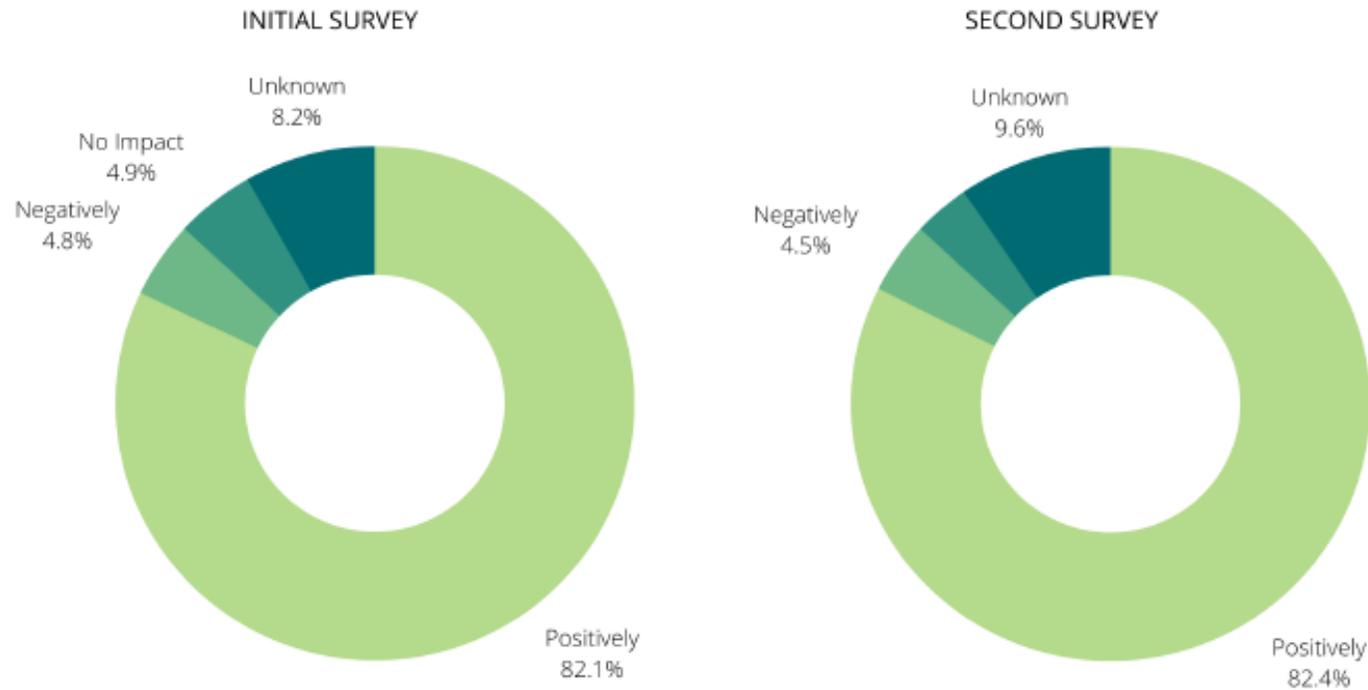

I hope everyone had a restful, joyful break and will have a healthy New Year!

Cindy
