

Mark Hochman, PhD

Director of Research Management | Resources Pty Ltd.

Mark Hochman gained a PhD in science (geology) in 1991 and has been in research management for more than 25 years including a period of 20 years as Director of the Research and Innovation Services Office at the University of South Australia. He is a foundation member of the Australasian Research Management Society (ARMS) and served on the ARMS Executive for six years, including a period as President in 2007/2008.

Mark is the Past-President of SRAI's International Section and is an At-Large Board member of the Board of Directors. He is an SRAI Distinguished Faculty and was presented with the Hartford-Nicholsen Award in 2015. Mark is a cochair of the SRAI Education and Professional Development Committee and is past chair of SRAI's Governance Committee.

Mark currently works as the Director at Research Management Resources Pty Ltd. He has previously been employed through Central Queensland University building education and professional development programs for ARMS and consulted in research management and strategy for the remainder of his time. As a consultant he had been Program Manager overseeing development of an accreditation program for ARMS which provided the foundation level learning and skills for those who are new in the research management profession. He also acted as Program Manager for a 2012 national pilot program in Australia examining the case study approach to assessing research impact. Since 2011 he has conducted research management reviews of Research Offices, research policies and strategies in 14 Australian universities. In 2014, Mark was awarded the inaugural Janet-Dibb-Leigh Award for distinguished service to the Australasian research management community.

Mark understands the specific needs of senior research administrators and managers and has run successful programs on building effective Research Offices and leadership development for
