

STATE OF TEXAS
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

As our healthcare needs change, we have developed a greater appreciation of the need for high-quality care at the end of life. Homecare and hospice workers help patients achieve greater independence and dignity during challenging circumstances, and their commitment represents the best of the Lone Star State.

Home care and hospice organizations provide individualized, professional care and assistance to patients with specialized needs, including the elderly, disabled, and chronically ill. These services offer patients cost-effective care options that facilitate healing in the comfort of their home and with their loved ones.

Modern medicine depends upon the expertise and tender care of the professionals who support facilities throughout our state and nation. In many cases, patients require or prefer a more home-like setting for their healthcare needs; home care and hospice services are therefore of great use to Texans.

Each year, the month of November is set aside to honor our dedicated home care and hospice professionals and to raise awareness about these services. It is imperative that Texans educate themselves about the many options available to them, such as home care and hospice, which support patients and their families during difficult journeys.

At this time, I encourage all Texans to learn more about home care and hospice options and about the invaluable work and compassionate care of these healthcare providers.

Therefore, I, Greg Abbott, Governor of Texas, do hereby proclaim November 2025 to be

Home Care and Hospice Month

in Texas and urge all Texans to observe the occasion with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto affixed my signature this the 29th day of September, 2025.
