Engagement Opportunities

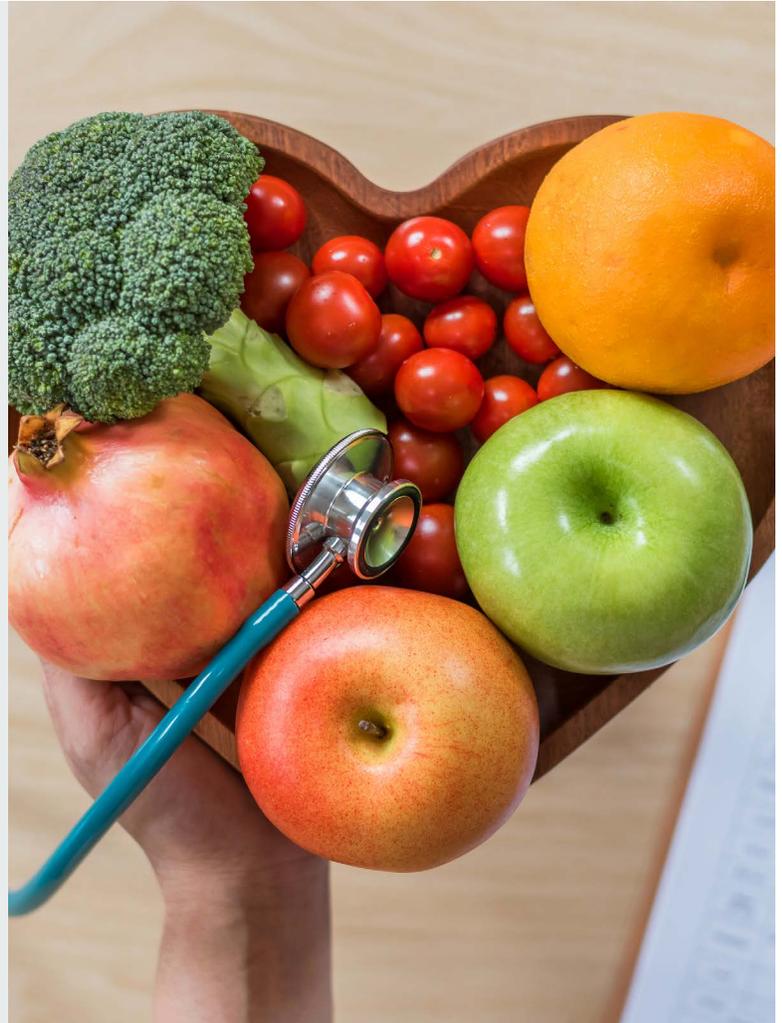

Food and Nutrition Series

Help highlight RDNs impact on non-communicable diseases.

The State of Food and Nutrition Series: The Impact of RDNs on Non-communicable Diseases seeks to understand the barriers to nutrition care access and how to scale up access to RDNs to help improve outcomes for three high-priority NCDs: hypertension, chronic kidney disease, and type 2 diabetes. These NCDs were selected due to their high prevalence in the U.S. and across the globe and the high costs and poor outcomes from treating individuals with these chronic diseases.

The data gathered during the Series can be used to model potential outcomes that could be achieved across the U.S. against these NCDs of focus if similar nutrition professional engagement were scaled across the broader population. There is a tremendous opportunity for the Academy to publish and promote the results of the Series to drive greater awareness of the role of its members and the value of RDNs in NCD care and outcomes. Sponsors will receive acknowledgement in the Series Report, preview of Series Report prior to dissemination and ability to promote Series Report (language provided by the Foundation).

Research & Fellowships

The Foundation supports efforts to expand prospective, evidence-based food and nutrition research and interventions through collaboration with the Academy's Research, International and Scientific Affairs team. Part of this work is conducted by a Foundation Fellow. Current and past fellowships have focused on healthy and sustainable food systems, malnutrition, retail nutrition, school food waste and various other focus areas.

This program allows the Academy and the Foundation to demonstrate the value of credentialed food and nutrition practitioners, effectively advocate for scaling evidenced-based solutions, and amplify the contribution of the food and nutrition workforce. Nearly $1.2 million has been provided to support 18 fellows. In total, the Foundation has invested $3 million for projects in the U.S. and internationally in Guatemala, India, and Rwanda.

Future opportunities range from supporting a current or past fellow to attend the Academy's Leadership Institute to funding a full or partial fellowship as part of a larger research project.
