An important prevalence of disordered eating behaviors seems to exist among this student-athlete population. However, an association between disordered eating behaviors and a previous concussion was not evidenced by our data.