April 21 to 29, 2016

Dear Gator Traveler:

Join the University of Florida for this exceptional eight-day voyage aboard the newly launched, state-of-the-art Five-Star Small Ship M.S. LE LYRIAL featuring several of the most unique and breathtaking ports of Southern Europe. Our comprehensive itinerary features up to seven impressive UNESCO World Heritage sites that preserve the fascinating cultures left in the wake of the Phoenicians, Romans, Carthaginians and Moors. Cruise from the ancient Spanish cities of Málaga and Cartagena to the stunning islands of Sardinia and Sicily and conclude with the classical ruins of Rome. Choose to admire the grandeur along Italy's extraordinary Amalfi Coast on an optional excursion. Culinary expert Kristine Kidd, former editor of Bon Appétit magazine, further enhances our voyage with exclusive onboard C'est Bon! CULINARY TRADITIONS™ lectures celebrating the cuisines and wines of our ports of call.

The M.S. LE LYRIAL exemplifies the advantages of Five-Star, small ship cruising: elegant accommodations and an exclusive itinerary carefully crafted with a specially arranged excursion in each port. The M.S. LE LYRIAL features only 110 Suites and Staterooms with distinctive French sophistication and has the ability to dock in small ports of call inaccessible to larger vessels, so there is no waiting in long lines for tenders and touring.

Plan to further extend your travel with the Alluring Andalusia Pre-Cruise Option, featuring three captivating cities in the heart of Andalusia: the artistic, coastal city of Marbella; the medieval city of Granada with its architectural gem, the Alhambra—a UNESCO World Heritage site; and the breathtaking hilltop town of Ronda, where modern bullfighting originated. The Eternal Classics of Rome Post-Cruise Option highlights the UNESCO World Heritage site ruins of the ancient Roman Empire, St. Peter's Basilica and Michelangelo's celebrated Sistine Chapel.

I encourage you to make your plans early for this one-of-a-kind cruise itinerary and great travel value. Early Booking Savings are only available through October 6, 2015.

Sincerely,

Timothy L. Walsh

A MEDITERRANEAN MÉLANGE ACROSS THE MILLENNIA

The fabled islands and coastlines of the Mediterranean Sea from southeast Spain to southwest Italy are so magnificent that the ancient Greeks associated them with their gods, goddesses and heroes of mythology. Aphrodite, the goddess of love, built a beautiful palace on the island of Sicily, where Dionysus, the god of wine, discovered grapes to harvest, and the inhabitants of Sardinia claimed to be descendants of Hercules, heroic son of Zeus.

During this expansive itinerary, experience firsthand a unique blend of the many cultures that coexist in this extraordinary Mediterranean region. The prosperous, seafaring ports that were built, conquered and reconquered by Phoenician, Carthaginian, Roman, Byzantine and Moorish civilizations formed the beginnings of the Western World on these shores, and today retain the art, culture, architecture, literature, cuisine, philosophy and religious influence of their former empires that make them so endlessly captivating.

Málaga, Spain

The beautiful town of Málaga, on Spain's southern coastline, remains a thriving port city of Andalusia, just as it was when the Phoenicians settled here in 770 B.C. Under rule of the Roman Empire in 238 B.C., and eventually taken over by the Moors, Málaga was shaped by the influences of each of these disparate empires into the distinct city of varied architecture, religions, customs and culture it is today.

Cartagena

Founded in 223 B.C. on the shores of a natural harbor, ancient Cartagena became a strategically important port city for trade and economic purposes as it was in close proximity to a wealth of gold and silver mines. The Romans captured it in 209 B.C., and Carthago Nova (New Carthage), remained a Roman outpost throughout the reign of Julius Caesar and Emperor Augustus until it was conquered by the Visigoths in A.D. 425, subsequently falling to Byzantine and Moorish rule, and finally to the Castilians.

See the ruins of the medieval Castillo de la Concepción, the city's imposing hilltop fortress, and the impressive Roman Theater of Carthago Nova, a 6000-seat amphitheater built at the end of the second century B.C. Admire Cartagena's ancient streets filled with early architecture and remnants of the Phoenician, Roman, Byzantine and Moorish periods, alongside stunning Art Nouveau buildings constructed in the early 20th century.

Nora, Sardinia, Italy

On the storied island of Sardinia, enjoy an excursion near the Italian village of Cagliari, where you will visit the remarkable archaeological site of Nora. According to legend, the town was founded by Norax, the mythological hero son of the Greek god Hermes. Originally a Phoenician trading post, later a Punic settlement and finally a Roman town, Nora's important collection of ancient Punic and Roman ruins features patrician villas decorated with beautiful mosaic floors and the grand theater that is still in use today.
