URMIA's President-Elect Recognized with 2018 Break Out Award

Bloomington, Ind. – Luke Figora, assistant vice president for risk management & environmental health & safety of Northwestern University's Office of Risk Management, has been recognized with a 2018 Break Out Award by Business Insurance. The awards program, which succeeds the 40 Under 40 Broker Awards, recognizes the next generation of insurance industry leaders.

Figora currently also serves as president-elect of the board of the University Risk Management & Insurance Association (URMIA), an international nonprofit educational association dedicated to promoting the advancement of risk management principles and best practices on campus. The association serves a community of over 2,400 professionals at more than 600 institutions of higher learning, plus 100 affiliate companies and partner organizations that serve the needs of higher education risk management.

According to Jennifer Whittington, URMIA's executive director, "Luke has been an exemplary member of the association, always willing to share his expertise with others and mentor those new to the field of risk management. We congratulate him on receiving this award."
