URMIA launches its 5th annual Higher Education Risk Management Week this November

October 7, 2016 – Bloomington, Ind. – The University Risk Management and Insurance Association (URMIA) is proud to announce the launch of its fifth annual Higher Education Risk Management Week, or Risky Business Week, on November 7-11, 2016.

The first of its kind for higher education risk management, Risky Business Week is dedicated to highlighting the importance of risk management on campus. Risky Business Week builds awareness of how risk management can provide innovative and effective solutions to the challenges facing institutions of higher education in the pursuit of their academic, social and economic goals. Risk management plays an important role throughout the year in protecting the health and safety of students, faculty, staff, and campus guests, as well as the financial operations and reputations of higher education institutions.

To speak with an URMIA member about their Risk Management Week experiences, how URMIA has helped shape risk management on their campus, or how Risk Management Week has raised awareness of risk issues at their institution, please contact Jennifer Whittington, executive director, at urmia@urmia.org or 812-727-7130.
