DR. TIM ROYER ANNOUNCED AS SPEAKER AT WGCA AND GCAA MEMBER CONVENTIONS

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. – Neuropsychologist Dr. Tim Royer will speak at the Women's Golf Coaches Association (WGCA) and Golf Coaches Association of America (GCAA) National Conventions on Wednesday, December 7 in Las Vegas.

In 2002, Dr. Royer started a practice working individually with students who were struggling behaviorally and academically. He expanded that experience into a school-based business in which he could provide student testing and treatment within the school setting, while coordinating the parent's and teacher's concerns under one roof, to produce improved academic performance. This successful concept developed into a thriving chain of clinics providing brain-based treatment to clients of all ages, addressing concerns of attention, memory, sleep, anxiety, mood and peak performance.

Today Dr. Royer's work continues in client's homes, universities, stadiums and businesses across the globe through Royer Neuroscience and Inner Armor. For 25 years he has been working tirelessly to improve the brains of his clients and impact their quality of life. Combining cutting edge technology with proven principles and tools, Dr. Royer produces the highest quality of expertise in brain optimization and peak performance. He has worked with numerous professional and collegiate athletes including 20+ pro golfers, including the former #1 in the world, the San Francisco 49ers, Cleveland Browns, Orlando Magic, Portland Trailblazers, and more. His unique experience and education comes together to provide a holistic and proprietary training process to help athletes forge resiliency. Dr. Royer is a believer in the power of the brain! He is double board certified in neurofeedback and heart rate variability, providing him the means to produce brain balance.
